The Death of Dr. Hanna.

There seems, now that the circumstances

There seems, now that the circumstances are known, no doubt that Dr. John G. Hanna, whose death in the station-house was mentioned Friday, committed deliberate suicide. It appears that less than an hour before his arrest for supposed drunkenness, Hanna visited Richard Crown, at Seventh and Market Space, and sent a message to his wife that he loved her so well that he could not live without her, and would end the wretched business by taking ten grains of morphine within an hour. John Driscoll, who was confined in the same cell during the night, noticed that Hanna was breathing foundly until about 3 o'clock, but supposed it only a drunken stupor, until the morning light showed the man was dead. When Dr. J. T. Hoskins, who was summoned at once, arrived from the Emergency Hospital, a arrived from the Emergency Hospital, a very brief examination convinced him there was no chance of resuscitation, and the Coroner was notified. Dr. Hoskins was not told of the symptoms noticed by Driscoll, and there was nothing to give rise to suspicion of death from anything but excessive alcoholism.

AMUSEMENTS.

"BILLER TAYLOR."—An unusually delightful performance is promised at Albaugh's Grand Opera-House this week. One of the most sparkling and merry of the comic operas, with a strong cast and good chorus, presents a popular summer attraction, "Billee Taylor" will be presented by the following cast: Captain the Hon. Felix Flapper of H. M. S. Thunder-tomb, Louis De Lange; Sir Missing Lane, Alexander Clark; Billee Taylor, George Appleby; Ben Barnacie, W. H. West; Christopher Crab, H. M. Imano; Phebe Fairleigh, Mary Beebe; Arabella Lane, Agnes Stone; Eliza Dubece, Miss Rosa Cooke; Sionan, Rheta Mann; Jane Scraggs, Miss Liste Leigh. This company has already made too favorable an impression this season to require commendation, and will doubtless, throughout the present week, attract the large and fashionable audiences which have attended and enjoyed its previous performances. General Bennett H. Hill, U. S. A., is at joyed its previous performances.

THE MEXICAN ORCHESTRA.—The Mexican Orchestra which created a furore at the New Orleans Exposition and has achieved pronounced success throughout the country, will give a series of performances at Ford's Opera-House next week. The Orchestra chestra possesses the charm of novelty and is highly commended by musical critics. The sale of seats will begin on Wednesday morning and at summer Comque Summer Garden.—A highly sensational entertainment is promised this week at the Comique Summer Garden. No matter how warm the weather may be it is always cool at this resort.
